CITY'S BUDGET FOR NEXT YEAR ASKS $403,422

Figure Approved by Council Although No Operating Funds are in Sight EXCEEDS 1935 TOTAL State Law Will Not Permit Use of Gasoline Tax to Pay WPA Engineer

Although no funds are in sight for operating expenses, council Tuesday night at a meeting in the municipal building approved the 1936 budget amounting to $403,422.

Compared with the 1935 budget by more than $75,000, it will be submitted to Columbiana County Auditor John H. Irwin at Lisbon, who will determine the amount of revenues forthcoming.

The amounts, estimated by the councilmanic finance committee, are: General fund, $274,038; bond retirement fund, $77,049.14; sinking fund, $47,700; firemen's pension fund, $3,000, and policemen's pension fund, $1,000.

Replying to Quest For Funds Lindell Urges Safety Director E. B. Laughlin's query as to "what should be done about paying WPA engineers hired here," Councilman Harry S. Lindell declared council and the city officials should "give some thought to the police and fire departments in view of the fact there will not be one cent for operating expenses next year."

Solicitor Raymond S. Buzzard explained a recent act of the legislature precluded the possibility of a proposed transfer of $1,000 from the gasoline tax fund to the engineering fund, after Mr. Laughlin pointed out the engineers had been employed in anticipation of revenue from this source.

Acting on a petition by property owners, council instructed Mr. Buzzard to prepare legislation authorizing the grading and paving of Kent street in East End. The improvement also was recommended by the street committee.

Under Gasoline Fund Banned Senator Buzzard said gasoline tax funds could not be used for construction of new streets, after Councilman Walter Ashbaugh indicated some means of financing the city's share of the cost of the project, about $650, should be found. The engineer's estimate for the improvement is $5,000.

Director Laughlin was authorized to purchase a right-of-way through the J. W. Curry Sr. property near the west end of Sixth street for $1, to permit the construction of the Carpenter run sanitary sewer. According to a letter to council, the owner agreed to grant the right-of-way, providing no assessments would be made against the property and he was given permission to connect with the sewer without charge.

GRAND JURY INQUIRY SEEN IN HOEY DEATH

Coroner's Inquest Results In Open Verdict

By The Associated Press. WEST CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 25.—A double-barreled grand jury investigation was held possible today as a result of the open verdict returned by a coroner's jury into the death of Evelyn Hoey, blues singer, at the farm home of Henry H. Rogers, third.

The verdict itself paved the way for a grand jury inquiry into the death. Attorneys for Rogers and his cameraman friend, William J. Kelley, announced they would "heartily cooperate" in any similar investigation of the conduct of the coroner's jurors.

The verdict, returned by six jurors last night after nearly five hours of deliberation, said Miss Hoey came to her death in Rogers' country home two weeks ago at the hands of "a person or persons unknown."

Rogers and Kelly were released from their appearance bond. District Attorney William E. Parke said all evidence he knows has been presented, "and that does not justify a warrant of arrest."

Parke said he is "seriously considering" asking the Chester county court for a grand jury inquiry. A statement signed by five lawyers representing Rogers and Kelly said they "are not surprised at the failure of the coroner's jury to find a verdict of death by suicide."

They say this because of reliable information brought to us that some of the members of the coroner's jury have been privately conferring with representatives of certain newspapers whose sole purpose seems to be to prolong this investigation, and because of declarations by certain jurors of their pre-conceived intention to render a so-called open verdict.

LEGION ATTACKS SOVIET RUSSIA

U. S. Requested to Withdraw Recognition; Increased Army, Navy Sought

By The Associated Press. MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM, ST. LOUIS, Sept. 25.—The American Legion today asked the United States to withdraw its recognition of Soviet Russia.

Delegates cheered as J. J. Twomey of Massachusetts, chairman of the committee on Americanism trade, offered the resolution.

After commending legislation for national defense passed by the last congress, the National Legion convention adopted a report calling for a concentration of national defense methods.

The resolution urged a standing army of 165,000 enlisted men with 14,000 officers augmented by 210,000 national guardsmen, and continuation of officers training camps, the C. M. T. C. and R. O. T. C. in schools.

A treaty navy on a parity with any navy in the world manned by 92,000 enlisted men and 15,000 officers, and new naval trading ships also was recommended.

Active opposition to "Nazism, fascism, communism and other isms contrary to the principles enunciated in the Constitution" was voted in another resolution. As a matter to be considered in its legislative program, the Legionnaires voted demands for closing of all immigration for 10 years, deportation of undesirables and destitute aliens, and fingerprinting of all persons.

Behind the prosaic listing on the convention calendar, "report of the committee on legislation," was a stack of 45 resolutions, each submitted by a separate state department and each urging immediate cash payment of the adjusted compensation certificates, with no riders.

Indications were that the committee would come onto the floor of the convention with a resolution almost identical to the one voted at Miami last year. That resolution asked payment of the bonus but avoided any reference to a method of financing it.

The veterans of the last war may submit a legislative program that would saddle the cost of future wars on stay-at-homes.

2 FORMER LOAN OFFICIALS FACE 65 INDICTMENTS

G. Y. Travis and S. T. Herbert Released After Judge Sets $5,000 Bond Each

HEARING NEXT MONDAY

Charges Listed Separately And Jointly; Some Contain Several Counts

George Y. Travis and Sherman T. Herbert, former officials of the Union Savings and Loan Co., were at liberty under $5,000 bond each today, pending arraignment next Monday in the Columbiana county common pleas court at Lisbon upon a total of 65 indictments returned by the grand jury.

Bond was fixed by Judge W. F. Lones of Wellsville at a brief session in the Lisbon courthouse shortly after 5 p. m. Tuesday, following their arrest here by Sheriff Frank Ballantine and Deputy Sheriff George Hayes.

Both bonds were signed by Mrs. Esther E. Travis, who reported property valued at $28,790, and Jacob Leva, who listed a valuation of $6,020, or a total of $34,810.

Charges Are Listed

The charges, listed in separate and joint indictments, some of which include misapplication of funds, embezzlement, forgery, perjury, false entries and false reports, Prosecuting Attorney George L. LaFerty said.

Listed against Herbert are 37 indictments charging misapplication of money, funds and credits, perjury, embezzlement, director making false entry on book and forgery.

Travis is named in eight bills which charge misapplication of money, funds and credit, director certifying to false entries on annual report, and embezzlement.

20 Joint Bills Voted

Twenty joint indictments charge forgery and misapplication of money, funds and credits.

Purgatory charges pertain to mortgages and notes and perjury counts to certifications.

Travis, an attorney, and Herbert, who are associated in the real estate and insurance business, were president and secretary, respectively, of the savings and loan company until it was reorganized last May 20. E. K. Bennett, grocer, is now president and F. M. Cole, former state examiner of building and loan associations, is secretary.

COAL WAGE PARLEY DEADLOCK UNBROKEN

Negotiators Fail to Reach Compromise on Rates

By The Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Soft coal miners and operators remained deadlocked in their wage negotiations today as the United Mine Workers continued a widespread strike that began Monday morning.

"No progress" was the report Van A. Biltner, southern West Virginia district president of the mine union, made as he emerged from the conference room last night.

A difference of only a cent and a half on tonnage rates paid to the miners who dig and load the coal still was all that separated the workers and producers from an agreement to replace the old wage contract which originally expired last April 1. Since that time it has been extended five times.

The operators, it was understood, offered to boost the tonnage rates 7 1/2 cents over the present pay.

Reports from the coal fields yesterday said there was scattered picketing of mines but no disorder. Pickets, it was said, began patrolling a group of "wagon" pits in southwestern Pennsylvania while in Kentucky officers of the U. M. W. were called in court to answer an action brought by one coal company to prevent picketing.

The Women's Christian Temperance union favors local option elections "in order to get as many large dry areas as possible," Mrs. Charles Scott of Columbus, state lecturer, declared Tuesday night at the closing session of the 45th annual Columbiana county convention in the First United Presbyterian church here.

Her declaration was made in an address after a business meeting, at which Mrs. Lydia Brantingham of Winona, was reelected president and her home village selected for the 1936 convocation.

Mrs. Brantingham was also chosen delegate to the state convention at Newark, Oct. 15 to 18.

Kyes, East Palestine; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Sina B. Megrall, Winona; Americanization committee chairman, Mrs. Margaret Weidon, Wellsville; white ribbon recruit director, Mrs. Mary Shively, Rogers; evangelistic director, Mrs. Margaret Bricker, Lisbon; social morality director, Mrs. Mayme Miller, Wellsville.

Assails Liquor Conditions

Mrs. Scott said "liquor conditions throughout the state and nation, especially among young persons, are worse today than ever before."

The state organization, through a per capita assessment, has launched a five-year, $500,000 educational campaign against liquor evils, she added, which will be carried out through scientific methods. Radio addresses, newspaper publicity, illustrated lectures and other programs are planned.

An illustrated lecture was given by Mrs. Scott after resolutions were adopted condemning desecration of the Sabbath, cigarette smoking and territorial conquests by nations of the world.

She declared, "90 percent of all true reforms are brought about by education," and predicted the United States will again have prohibition.

Mrs. Scott speaks in Lisbon school children this afternoon and a meeting in the East Palestine United Presbyterian church to night. She is scheduled to appear at the Fairfield Centralized High school Thursday morning and New Waterford High school Thursday afternoon. She will speak at Salem Friday morning, Columbiana in the afternoon and Winona at night.

Addresses were given during the convention by Mayor O. Earl Greenawald, Mrs. Brantingham, and the East Liverpool president, Mrs. Blanch Partison.

"How Not to Do It," by 12 girls of the East Liverpool young people's branch, featured the night program.

Then he submitted a plan for $40,000,000 bond issue to provide for relief needs during the next two years.

Rep. P. E. Ward (R.) of Geauga, suggested a constitutional amendment to permit counties to issue bonds under the Carey act without a vote of the people.

CEREMONY PERFORMED TWO HOURS BEFORE LOUIS STEPPED INTO RING WITH BAER

By The Associated Press. NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Joe Louis was married to a Chicago stenographer last night two hours and five minutes before he was to climb through the ropes to trade punches with Max Baer.

While a noisy crowd waited outside, the Detroit Negro calmly went through a ceremony that made him the husband of Marva Trotter of Chicago.

Then, without a change of expression, he said, "I've got a date with a fellow named Max Baer," and rode off to the scene of the conflict behind a screaming motorcycle escort.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. C. Trotter, brother of the bride and a Baptist minister of Chicago, in the Harlem apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Porter, friends of Miss Trotter.

The municipal building being closed, Deputy City Clerk Philip A. Hines sent one of his aids to the apartment with a license blank.

Louis gave his full name as Joseph Louis Barrow, 21, and said he was the son of Minnie and Lilly Reese Barrow, a native of Montgomery, Ala.

He gave his occupation as "boxer."

The bride, who wore a dress of white satin, appeared nervous during the 25 minute service.

She was attended by a sister, Novella, while John Roxborough, one of the fighter's two managers, acted as best man.

Following the service the bride accompanied her husband to Yankee stadium and watched from the 15th row while he pounded Max Baer into submission in the fourth round.

CLERGY'S HELP ASKED IN PLEA BY ROOSEVELT

Letter Seeks Advice on How Government Can 'Better Serve' Its People

ANSWERS REQUESTED

Political Aspects of Move Attracts Attention of Capital Observers

By The Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—President Roosevelt has asked clergymen for "counsel and advice" on how the government "can better serve our people."

In Rhode Island, Indiana, Maryland and Ohio, identically-phrased letters from the President to clergymen were made public.

"Because of the grave responsibilities of my office, I am turning to representative clergymen for counsel and advice, feeling confident that no group can give more accurate or unbiased views," the letter said.

Expressing particular hope that the new social security law and the works program shall be carried out effectively, the letter adds that the President will "deem it a favor if you will write me about conditions in your community."

It also explains that Mr. Roosevelt shortly will start a few weeks vacation — probably tomorrow — but hopes the replies will be sent in.

Surprise to Secretary

At the White House, Stephen T. Early, one of the President's secretaries, had said he knew nothing about such a letter having been sent to clergymen all over the country. This morning, he was closeted with the President before the usual semi-weekly press conference and could not be reached immediately for additional comment. He had declined to discuss the political significance, if any, of the President's action.

The text of one of the letters follows:

"Your high calling brings you intimate daily contact not only with your own parishioners, but with people generally in your community. I am sure you see the problems of your people with wise and sympathetic understanding."

"Because of the grave responsibilities of my office, I am turning to representative clergymen for counsel and advice, feeling confident that no group can give more accurate or unbiased views."

Conditions Sought

"I am particularly anxious that the new social security legislation just enacted, for which we have worked so long, providing for old-age pensions, aid for crippled children and unemployment insurance, shall be carried out in keeping with the high purpose with which this law was enacted. It is also vitally important that the works program shall be administered to provide employment at useful work, and that our unemployed as well as the nation as a whole may derive the greatest possible benefit."

"I shall deem it a favor if you will write me about conditions in your community. Tell me where you feel our government can better serve our people."

"We can solve our many problems, but no one man or single group can do it. We shall have to work together for the common end of better spiritual and material conditions for the American people."

"May I have your counsel and your help? I am leaving on a short vacation, but will be back in Washington in a few weeks and I will deeply appreciate your writing to me."

OHIO RELIEF ISSUE BEFORE LAWMAKERS

Assembly Reconvenes to Act On Pressing Problem

By The Associated Press. COLUMBUS, Sept. 25.—Ohio's general assembly reconvened in special session today and found its most pressing problem appeared to be a workable plan for relief financing.

Two administration-suggested methods are now before it. Another has been presented to the senate taxation committee.

Full memberships of both houses planned to meet at 1:30 p. m.

The state must devise a means for assuming the burden of providing direct relief after Nov. 1. The federal relief administration hopes to liquidate its Ohio setup by that time.

Various officials connected with the relief administration estimated that $23,000,000 will be required for 14 months after Nov. 1 to care for 66,000 unemployed families.

Gov. Davey first suggested a state relief authority, empowered to issue bond and distribute state funds to counties to care for the needy.

Then he submitted a plan for $40,000,000 bond issue to provide for relief needs during the next two years.

Rep. P. E. Ward (R.) of Geauga, suggested a constitutional amendment to permit counties to issue bonds under the Carey act without a vote of the people.

Gov. Davey's $88,000,000 fund juggling budget bill, a new plan for financing his $20,000,000 state building program and sundry minor legislation also were scheduled to come up for consideration of the legislators during the next three days.

2 JAIL BREAKERS ARE RECAPTURED

Lisbon Fugitives Arrested As Suspects in Holdup Of Salix, Pa., Bank

James Allen, 21, and Frank Saboe, 23, who, with two other prisoners, dug their way out of the 96-year-old Columbiana county jail at Lisbon Sept. 11, were recaptured Tuesday at Hanover, Pa., where they were held today as suspects in the holdup of a bank at Salix, Pa.

Ben Miller, 46, who escaped with Allen and Saboe, was captured near Salem by state highway patrolmen near Salem shortly after the delivery occurred, while Elmer Turner, 20, is still at large.

Allen and Saboe were awaiting grand jury investigation in connection with the burglary of an Oakland store. Miller was held as a suspect in the breaking and entering of the P. V. Mackall home here and Turner for driving an automobile, owned by County Treasurer George S. Boice of East Liverpool, without the owner's consent.

Although armed, Allen and Saboe, who gave their names as James Gowan and Charles Daisy, of New York City, surrendered without resisting, authorities said. They were captured near the Hanover railroad station.

Lieut. Charles C. Keller of the Greensburg state police barracks, revealed the suspects had $1,000, while officials of the Salix bank, near Johnstown, said they scooped up $500 from the cash drawer after binding the cashier Monday.

The Pennsylvania authorities also advised the sheriff's office at Lisbon the suspects had confessed to three burglaries here—the Emmerring store in Oakland, Moore club and Panacea automobile filling station on the East Liverpool-Youngstown highway.

Sheriff Frank Ballantine said no attempt would be made to extradite the prisoners. They were identified through fingerprints on file here.

ITALY TO KEEP WAR CONFINED IN EAST AFRICA

Warns Nations It Will Not Be First to Transfer Fighting to Europe

ETHIOPIA MAKES PLEA

League Asked to Send Group to Establish Aggressor in Case of Conflict

By The Associated Press. Two striking developments in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute originated today in Rome and Addis Ababa, the capitals of the opposing nations.

The Italian government announced officially that Italy never would be the first to transfer the conflict to Europe.

Almost simultaneously, Emperor Haile Selassie asked the League of Nations to send a neutral commission to Ethiopia to determine who might be the aggressor in the event of hostilities.

The emperor said Ethiopia would abide by the findings of such a commission.

The Italian announcement included a communication from Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, in which he said he was "particularly desirous of eliminating all useless misunderstandings" between Great Britain and Italy.

New pessimism was projected in Geneva by the publication of Italian officials observations which included the charge that the League of Nations, in attempting to avert war, had failed to take into consideration Italy's case against Ethiopia.

Rainy Season Near End

With Ethiopia's festival of mascal—the end of the rainy season—close at hand, the situation grew tense on the border between the black empire and the Italian colonies of Somaliland and Eritrea.

For many months, Italian sources have indicated that hostilities between the two countries might begin with the ending of the rains which hamper every type of ground transportation in Ethiopia.

All able-bodied warriors in Emperor Haile Selassie's northern provinces, concentrated in a mass movement, advanced toward the Eritrean front. The forces reformed and expanded the military units which were disbanded last spring at the beginning of the tropical rainy season.

The League of Nations made public charges by Italy that the League's five-power committee had failed to take into consideration allegations made by Italy against Ethiopia.

Italy had asked the committee to consider whether the East African empire was still worthy to belong to the League when it had not fulfilled its obligations and had openly violated others.

Tyranny Charged

The Italians contended that there are many different people who were "subject to tyranny in Ethiopia and live on frontiers of the country under inhuman conditions."

Italy also charged the conciliation committee had ignored the question of the defense of Italian colonies, Italy's mission in Africa, and did not bear in mind Italy's situation in Ethiopia as a result of the 1906 tripartite treaty.

Officials at Rome, however, adopted a policy of "patience," and government spokesmen asserted "the next move is up to the League of Nations." They felt there would not be any immediate revival of tension with Great Britain or any other League member over the Ethiopian impasse, since yesterday's cabinet communique indicated "Italy's willingness to give the League a chance."

France's premier, Pierre Laval, having lost hope for preventing an East African war, turned to a study of punitive sanctions against all future aggressors. French officials had asked for British assurances in demanding League action against future aggressors. They expected a "favorable" reply.

"Sadly disillusioned" by Il Duce's refusal to come to peaceful terms with Ethiopia, Laval conferred with Anthony Eden of Britain over a common Franco-British course.

The British press forecast an important pronouncement on Britain's foreign policy. The statement is expected to be in the form of a note to be handed to the French ambassador. It may, it was said, amplify and reaffirm that Britain will remain faithful to its European obligations as long as the League of Nations was an effective body.

DEMOCRATIC MACHINE DRAWS BRICKER FIRE

Attorney General Charges Taxes Used for Politics

By The Associated Press.
RICHWOOD, Sept. 25.—Attorney General John W. Bricker told a large audience at the Seventh district G. O. P. rally here last night that Ohio's rising tax bill "will change us from citizens of a free state."

Bricker, who is expected to be a contender for the Republican nomination for governor, charged that nation to subjects of an all-powerful political machine had been built in the state at the expense of the taxpayers.

"A state highway department that has had an overhead operating cost of $1,000,000 annually and a state tax commission that spends $1,500,000 for operating purposes are indicative of the extent to which a political machine has been built in Ohio at the expense of the taxpayers," he said.

CATHOLIC YOUTH STAGE SERVICE

Children Have Day of Ritual After Al Smith Denounces Communistic Hate

By The Associated Press.
CLEVELAND, Sept. 25.—Thousands of children clad in immaculate white, gathered today in the broad amphitheater which rang last night with praise of the eucharist and denunciations of communism.

The children, eager for their day of ritual and benediction in the pageantry of the seventh national Eucharistic congress, made ready to attend a solemn pontifical mass in the brightly decorated Cleveland stadium.

Al Smith Speaks
In the same stadium last night, Alfred E. Smith, a commanding figure among the Catholic laity, voiced vigorous profession of his faith in the blessed sacrament of the Eucharist and proposed that society must be organized on the basis of love "in the name of him who gave his life for us on Calvary," or it will organize on the basis of sin.

The former governor of New York received a stirring ovation from an estimated 45,000 persons who rose in the tiers of seats and applauded as a symphony orchestra struck up the contagious strains of "The Sidewalks of New York."

Communists Taught Hate
"Communism enables me to help my brother because I love him," said Smith. "The Communist can't do that because he is taught to hate him. There is nothing a Communist can do for me but I can offer my holy communion for him that mightily God may give him the power to understand the right."

He said he did not propose to deal with the economic features of communism "for the simple reason that I don't understand them—but there is one thing you can understand and that's the result of a trial of communism."

The 1928 presidential nominee spoke from a canvas covered area in the center of the field. Powerful floodlights atop the mammoth stadium were flashed on a few moments before the arrival of Patrick Cardinal Hayes of New York, papal legate to the congress, and other dignitaries.

FALL MAKEUP STYLES DECREE GOLD POWDER

Beauty Specialists Derive New Modes From Renaissance

By The United Press.
CHICAGO — Women will go on the gold standard this fall if they keep their eye on the complexities of smart complexions.
The wave for the decorative launched by Renaissance styles and colors has cast its influence on makeup, say nationally known beauty specialists in the Merchandise Mart here. The result is a new golden treatment for eyelids, a magic-making shade of blue for lashes and brows and a number of new and exciting shades in lipstick.

Despite the definite trend toward the new and unusual in makeup, complexionists approach the natural more closely than for many seasons.
Foremost news in makeup is the new golden powder, with infinitesimal flecks of gold blended into its base. Discreetly applied on the lids of brown and hazel eyes, this new powder gives them glamour. It also can be used effectively by the woman who knows her makeup calculus to accentuate the best lines of cheek and jaw. The gold powder can be used during the day if discreetly applied, experts say.

Service/Safety Director George B. Imbrie, of Wellsville, today announced that work of improving Riverside avenue between Fourth and Ninth streets would begin next Monday with employment for 25 men.

MEXICANS TO CONVERT CANNONS INTO PLOWS

Agrarian and Employment Programs Bring Utilization Decree

MEXICO CITY.—Old cannons and surplus war material will be converted into 10,000 plows by order of President Lazaro Cardenas.

A decree has been issued, ordering the administration of war materials to utilize the government factory in manufacturing agricultural implements. The purpose of the decree is two-fold: first, to aid the agrarian program of the six-year plan; secondly, to give work to the 1,500 employees of the national arms and munitions factory, who might soon be thrown out of work, as practically all the money appropriated for war materials in 1935 has been spent.

The operation, which will cost between $50,000 to $100,000 (Mexican silver dollars) will be financed by the National Bank of Agricultural credit.

WELLSVILLE TO SEEK FUNDS FOR WPA COST SHARE

Council to Study Financial Angle of City's Program Next Tuesday Night

PLANS STREET WORK

Sidewalk Projects Provide Employment for Men Now On Relief Rolls

Wellsville officials today prepared to seek funds to pay the city's share of the cost of materials to be used in a works progress administration program which will be launched early in October by the Columbiana county relief administration.

Councilmen indicated they will study the financial situation at next Tuesday night's session, in the hope that ways and means may be found to provide funds for an appropriation.

Service-Safety Director George B. Imbrie was advised Tuesday that President Roosevelt has approved allocation of federal funds for the improvement of 11th street and repaving and painting at the Central fire station.

Under a WPA project list previously sanctioned, county officials said work will be started next Monday on Riverside and Chester avenues.

Other projects have been urged for Wellsville, but Washington action on the list is not expected until next month.

Sidewalk construction, under a share-the-cost plan whereby property owners provide materials and the WPA office assigns labor, is now the only employment for Wellsville men on relief rolls.

STOCKS CLIMB, TRADE BRISKER

Continued Improvement in Foreign Markets Aids General Upswing

By The Associated Press. NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Encouraged by improvement in financial markets abroad and a slight quickening in the trading pace, the stock market moved upward in orderly manner today.

Advances ranged from small fractions to well over a point with a large assortment of specialties, communication, industrial, railroad and motor shares firmly entrenched in the higher bracket.

The commodity trend likewise was higher. Led by a fresh advance in corn, grain markets displayed steadiness and cotton scored modest gains with good buying orders reported from the Orient. Further improvement in low-priced railroad issues gave the bond market a firm appearance. Leading foreign currencies had a slight edge on the dollar in early exchange dealings.

Leaders in the share list included American Telephone, Thatcher Mfg., Libbey-Owens-Ford, American Smelting, Delaware & Hudson, Great Northern, Santa Fe, National Steel, Chrysler, Phillips Petroleum, Continental Can, International Harvester, Sears Roebuck, Western Union, Radio Preferred "B," American Can, General Electric, Westinghouse and Curtiss-Wright.

Mid-week business reviews were, with few exceptions, of a favorable nature. Car loadings of carriers thus far reporting for last week held up well.

Extension of yesterday's gain in some of the leading aircraft stocks attracted attention in board rooms where reports went the rounds that large orders were soon to be placed by the government.

OHIO NEEDS MORE CONCRETE ROADS

My sales jump when I travel on CONCRETE

"... and my car operating costs drop. I cover my territory quicker with less wear and tear on nerves and car. I save energy for selling. I see more prospects and sell more goods!"

Business of all kinds needs concrete roads. They appeal to taxpayers, because they cost less to build than any other roads of equal load carrying capacity. Surface maintenance costs are $114 to $469 less per mile per year than for other types. It pays to demand concrete for every road carrying 100 vehicles or more per day.

The Hard Way

A strike is the hard way of making an agreement. In a fundamental industry, like the bituminous coal industry, it is, also, the dangerous way. The coal strike called Monday morning, fearful enough in itself, threatens the stability of other industries as well. Any strike of similar proportions is a national affliction.

Eventually, of course, all strikes are settled. It would be interesting to know exactly, however, what is gained and what is lost. In May, 1933, wage costs in the Appalachian area averaged 61.4 cents a ton. By December, 1934, wage costs per ton had increased to an average of $1.53, an increase of 87.8 percent in less than two years. Yet, despite the percentage increase the total wage payments to miners probably were not more than $120,000,000 in excess of what they would have been had they remained at the May, 1933, level.

The current dispute is on an increase of a few cents a ton over what operators are willing to pay. The total benefit to miners will not be great. Individual benefits will be small on an annual basis. If the strike is prolonged, years will be required to make up the income lost or provided from financial reserves of the union.

The operators' position, of course, may be determined more exactly. They know exactly at what point they start to lose money. Some of them, who claim they are losing money under the scale of wages which has prevailed up to this time, either must continue to operate at a greater loss or go out of business. Unfortunately, due to their investments, going out of business is no solution to their problem.

Against a background of mutual difficulty—wages too low to sustain a decent standard of living and profits too low to allow payment of high wages—miners and operators have tried to reach an agreement. In desperation and bad temper, they have resorted to the hard way, thereby increasing hugely their already perplexing dilemma. An early settlement with minimum damage is the best they can hope for now.

Legality

The special League of Nations committee to seek a peaceful solution of the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia has admitted failure, yet Italy seems to hesitate. Apparently, it wants to establish the legality of its colonial adventure, if possible.

Ethiopia, possibly more adept in diplomacy than Premier Mussolini anticipated, has refused to walk into a trap. Instead, it has given at least the appearance of conformance with international law by agreeing to consider proposals for a peaceful solution of a dispute to which it has contributed nothing but its natural refusal to yield to Italy. From the standpoint of legality, Ethiopia has the upper hand.

There is little doubt of Italy's ability to disrupt the loosely organized kingdom of Emperor Haile Selassie. There is grave doubt, however, of Italy's ability to colonize Ethiopia successfully, which seems to explain why Great Britain, particularly, has made a show of force to discourage the adventure. Italy's failure in Africa would create a problem for other nations with African territories to control. Great Britain's motive in concentrating its naval strength to discourage Italy arises from a desire to avert trouble for itself, as well as from a desire to avert Italian seizure of Ethiopia.

Therefore, it is reasonable to assume there is a point at which Great Britain will refuse to gamble further on the chance of maintaining the status quo with a show of force. There is nothing in Africa worth the price of a war with Italy, which would lead inevitably to further complications in Europe. The pressing question of the moment is whether or not, if Italy decides to go ahead with an illegal war, Great Britain will be able to retire from its position without getting into unwanted trouble.

If Italy desires legality enough to abandon its plans for aggression in Ethiopia, the League of Nations will be able to claim credit. Even if war occurs, recognition will be due the fact that Italy hesitated to wage war in the face of the league's disapproval—which is, of course, merely the collective disapproval of individual nations which have been provided with the means of expressing themselves by the international organization at Geneva. The League of Nations may lose less prestige in the Italian-Ethiopian dispute than was predicted at the outset of the argument.

Friendly But Vigorous

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson long ago convinced analysts that in politics he is a mixture whose secret can be discovered only by himself. Apparently, he still is trying to discover his compound.

He plans to be a friendly vigorous critic conducted on the stump, in plain view of the public. He is going to resign as works progress administrator for New York City and go on an extended speaking tour.

He plans to be a friendly vigorous critic of the Roosevelt administration and the new deal. There are, he has decided, many things wrong with the administration and its policies and he hopes to correct them by lashings with his facile tongue.

It seems useless to go further into his plans, which probably will be altered to suit circumstances anyway. But what has been more intriguing in recent political history than the activities of this flamboyant promoter who orates almost as well on one side of the fence as on the other, depending on his mood? If an open mind and a willingness to remain open to conviction at all times be a sign of greatness, then truly Gen. Johnson already has secured a niche in the hall of immortals. Though still an ardent new dealer in his consuming desire to make things better, the general seems to be increasingly doubtful about the methods being used. In other words, he is a good deal like most of the rest of us.

Breakdown

Three deductions may be made from the latest radical shift in the federal government's work relief plan. State administrators have been given responsibility for making the plan successful.

There has been virtually a complete breakdown of the plan's original terms, which consisted chiefly of absorption of 3,500,000 employable relief beneficiaries in jobs on permanently useful projects by the beginning of winter.

There is only one interpretation to put on the breakdown. It means that the theory of work relief is a means of alleviating distress among large numbers of unemployed persons is impractical for quick results. It might be possible to plan, over a period of years, public projects which could be started quickly in event of widespread unemployment, but without such planning in advance the theory of work relief does not work. This has been a familiar contention in the United States. In England, it is an accepted fact.

The second deduction to be made from the breakdown of work relief is that central administration of a national activity as broad and complex as the administration's program is impossible with existing administrative talent. The program has hobbled itself in red tape, to the extent of forcing the administration to decentralize administration. Yet, many believe the solution may be even worse than the problem, due to greater temptations of corruption.

A third deduction concerns the political effect of the breakdown in work relief. The Roosevelt administration has been criticized before on the score of sketching broad plans without giving sufficient attention to practical details. President Roosevelt's work relief program has proved to be a grim demonstration of that dangerous deficiency. It was not thought out in advance. It raised high hopes, which it dashed to the ground with unsatisfactory performances. It has been the greatest disappointment which the administration's ineptitude has yet produced. No one is pleased; a great many, bitterly disappointed, are actively resentful.

An Older Generation

The death of DeWolf Hopper, occurring within a few hours of the death of Gen. W. W. Atterbury, is another pointed reminder that the names of many well known men in the early years of the 20th century are being transferred from the active list to the tablets of memory.

Gen. Atterbury and Mr. Hopper were successful in widely different fields. Gen. Atterbury, by the end of the century's first decade, was one of the country's rising railroad executives. He made his mark as an organizer in industry—an executive of extraordinary ability.

Mr. Hopper was comparably successful in a field which, during his lifetime, won increasing recognition for service different only in kind from that of industry and business. Mr. Hopper never was anything but an entertainer, but an entertainer of extraordinary ability.

He rode on the railroad which Gen. Atterbury managed and the general, it seems safe to assume, was a beneficiary of the laughter which Mr. Hopper stimulated. Both performed necessary work, one in an environment of materials, the other in an environment of moods and fantasies.

As the famous men of the century's first quarter pass from the scene of their activities, candidates appear to replace them. There will be another entertainer some day who will become as famous for some masterpiece of humor as DeWolf Hopper was for his recitation of "Casey at the Bat." There may even be another genius who can administer railroads as efficiently as Gen. W. W. Atterbury.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The last note of vaudeville's swan song echoes faintly along a bleak Rialto. A thin, whispering wall. As an amusement vaudeville seems definitely washed up. The final strongholds, the big movie houses, are dropping it one by one. Even Variety has become chiefly a movie and radio journal.

In front of the Somerset and around the Palace corner adjoining, remaining stragglers clot daily to express a cheerfulness they do not feel. They know they are whistling in the dark. There are many top-liners who look upon a split week a month as good going.

It is natural the hopefuls should cling to Palace shadows. For more than 20 years this was the Vaudeville Yulhaia, the apex of professional dreams. Once they played the Palace, they were made. The blow has fallen the heaviest on dumb acts, those who opened and closed the show.

The singers, dancers and monologists now and then find havens in the restaurant floor shows. But the jugglers, trapezists, trick bicyclists, Indian club swingers and perch acts have no place to turn. They devoted their lives to accomplishments that of a sudden have no appeal.

The Palace was in fullest bloom in early 1920's. The pontifical, silver-haired E. F. Albee was the vaudeville king, constantly hailed by Walter Kingsley's endless mimeographed odes to his pieties. The building was a hive of booking offices, the focus of theaters stretching from coast to coast. The sidewalk outside swarmed with the plaffing strut of headliners. A corner of egotistic blarney and no anchor, but the most fascinating from the Circle to the Square.

I remember going to the Palace's try-out bureau with a vaudeville skit I expected to end copy desk slavery over night. In my enthusiasm I hoped it might attract Herbert Kealey and Effie Shannon—no less! At any rate it seemed a detour in a path that must inevitably lead to that final outpost of defeated journalism, the exchange desk. I sat in the ante-room from 2 p. m. until 6:30 without getting into the inner sanctum. In desperation I left my sketch with an office boy to deliver to the proper reader. Six days later it was returned by mail, without comment and with 12 cents postage due. And it might encourage receivers of rejected manuscripts to chronicle that five years later I peddled it for $175.

Arthur Somers Roche proved the value of preserving off-rejected manuscripts. He exiled himself in a forlorn village on the Maine coast and wrote feverishly and futilely for almost two years without acceptance. Then his two mystery tales clicked in quick succession in a national weekly. You may recall them—"Loot" and "A Scrap of Paper." For the next year or so Roche frivoleed, high, wide and handsomely. When the exchequer got low he general into an old trunk and fished out one of the returned stories, polished it up and sent it off. Only one missed fire and it was freshened later and sold.

From a letter: "Did you ever mention in your column that one of the husbands of Kay Francis, of the movies, was J. Dwight Francis, son of prominent and long established residents of Pittsfield, Mass., and of all the names she liked this best? Her husband's maternal grandfather was Gen. Wm. Francis Bartlett, of Civil War fame, who was made a major general by brevet when he was only 24." At least to my notion, a breveted major general at 24 is interesting to recall!

Some fool in Houston, Texas, in the same mail, has made taking a pullman sleeper difficult for a long time. "Did you ever notice," the idiot inquires, "how train wheels murmur all night? He shot the dart right through my heart!"

They were talking at the Coffee House Club of peaks in paragraphing. I averted to one Meredith Nicholson used to recall, written by George C. Harding, Indianapolis newspaperman. It read: "The condor as it flies does not take call attention to its course—the pee-wee does." (Copyright, 1935, McNaught Syndicate)

NOTES ON OHIO HISTORY

From THE GALBRAITH COLLECTION

Written For Associated Press The Wright Brothers' Mother

Mrs. Milton Wright, mother of Orville and Wilbur Wright, the first to fly a heavier-than-air machine, was another mother who understood her sons when their teachers did not, and gave them free scope in the home to try out their dreams. She did not object to the boiling of ill-smelling chemicals on her kitchen stove by the boys, or the spotting of her pots and pans by some of the shocking explosions by which their experiments were often accompanied.

The barn loft was filled with contrivances the boys were continually tinkering with or trying out. Mrs. Wright did not mind the clutter the boys made and often referred to them as "boys who were special." When she was sick, the two dropped their experiments and took over the household duties. If she had been less understanding with them she could have crushed easily the spirit that imbued them.

DAILY HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, Sept. 26

THE LUNAR as well as mutual aspects for this day point to a rather peculiar and mysterious state of affairs, with the element of intrigue, subtlety of connivance entering into business matters. These may be used successfully in dealing with corporations, rings or secret organizations, but the purely private relations call for great discretion. Strange adventures, persons and places may lure. With proper caution there are signs of benefit and helpful friendships.

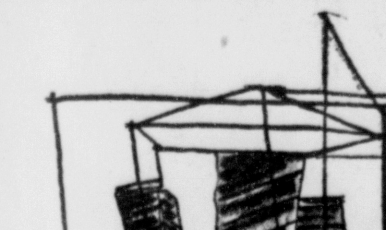

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year of peculiar, intriguing or unaccountable conditions, which may call for wariness and precaution in all transactions of a doubtful nature. Rings, mergers or secret societies may take peculiar proposals advantageous and probably developing some worthwhile friendships or preferences. But in the purely private relations he most circumspect.

A child born on this day may have a kind, friendly and charitable nature, but may be difficult to understand because of some subtleties or peculiarities. Relations with the opposite sex should be discreetly managed.

Behind the News IN WASHINGTON AND WALL STREET

BY PAUL MALLON MILWAUKEE.—The answer to most of the third party talk lies hidden in the minds of La Follette friends.

There may be some unorthodox tangents (Townsend, wealth sharers, etc.) in the next election, but even ward heelers know the La Follette are the ones to fear, now that Huey Long is gone. They have one of the two "third parties" now controlling a state. (The Farmer-Labor party in Minnesota has no comparable reputation and would follow the La Follette, but cannot do much without them.)

A friend asked the junior member of the firm, Gov. Phil La Follette, about this matter the other day. The governor backed away, smirked wisely, and then slowly wagged his head from left to right and back again. He did not need to say more.

It is hardly a secret in these parts that the La Follette have an unspoken but rather definite backstage understanding with President Roosevelt. They will get anything they want within reason in Washington, and Mr. Roosevelt will get Wisconsin, if they can arrange it—and they probably can.

Handclaps It may seem to outsiders that the La Follette sometimes publicly brush Mr. Roosevelt the wrong way, and vice versa. (Notably Mr. Roosevelt made a Green Bay speech a year ago which seemed to be a subtle rub against them.) But there are two underlying factors which make such demonstrations appear to be stage play.

One is that Mr. Roosevelt is personally fond of Phil and Bob, particularly Phil. The other is that Phil's friends have in the back of their minds the idea that he is presidential caliber and that 1940 is coming. If Phil himself has not considered the possibility, he has at least heard it mentioned.

You can get the right inside slant when you learn that Reliance Hopper permitted Phil to name the WPA administrator here, who in turn has loaded up that organization with La Follette men, leaving the Democratic organization out in the cold.

Dejection The Democratic machine in this state is a Model T. There is nothing to it but a steering wheel, and that, of course, is Mr. Roosevelt.

The business element here, in Chicago, is overwhelmingly dissatisfied, but the regular Republicans are too downtrodden to do much about it. Former Gov. Kohler of Kohler, who furnished the only substantial Republican plumping fixtures this state has had in years, has gone back to making them for public sale. He intends to keep on doing that.

There probably will be a Kohler, pledged delegation sent to the next Republican convention, but it will be only a compliment for past favors.

The secretary of the Republican state central committee polled the members about presidential preferences. The result was: Kohler, 29; Borah 21; Knox 8; Landon 5; Vandenberg 4; Lowden 2; Dickinson 1; and Hoover 1. The Knox people are beginning to work quietly.

Flop No one had the heart to say so at the time, but that convention of Young Democrats here was considerably less than a howling success.

The excuse was that arrangements were made in expectation that Mr. Roosevelt would attend. The plan was to accommodate 10,000 but the top count of young and old (including spectators) was 3,000.

Socialism A Socialist here does not mean the same thing as in Columbus Circle, New York City.

Milwaukee has a Socialist mayor, but the street car lines and the public utilities are privately owned. This is more than can be said of many a Democratic and Republican town. (The official explanation is that the mayor does not control the city council, but an unofficial one is that Socialists become practical, like everyone else, when they are elected.)

Incidentally, Phil La Follette's one-man brain trust is also a Socialist—Financial Secretary Thomas Duncan. The secretary had to wash off his Socialist war paint and become a member of the progressive party to get the job.

New Cars

A Kansas City editor went into a farm town in north Wisconsin recently on a Saturday night. There were so many new autos at the curb that he thought it was a convention of dealers. He found it was only the farmers in town for weekend shopping. He talked to a few of them, found these were the first new cars they had had in years. And most of the farmers were under the impression that President Roosevelt personally was responsible.

Notes

Believe it or not beer did not bring Milwaukee back. The breweries are booming but they employ relatively few men in comparison with the large number of unemployed. The brewers did very little new building.

Familiar sign here: "10 oz. glass of beer 5 cents." Also: "Roast beef sandwich, 5 cents." But car fare is 10 cents.

Streets are well filled; business is better, but nothing to wince about; machine tools must come back before Milwaukee does; there are many vacant stores off the main street.

The nation is supposed to be warring against crime, but there has not been a murder among these 600,000 quiet Germans, Swiss and Polish family folk since last January. One man overstimulated his capacity for schnapps one night and choked his wife, but that was not listed as a murder. (Copyright, 1935, R. J. Paul Mallon.)

By JAMES McMULLIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Bystanders need not be surprised if Herbert Hoover comes out at the proper time, which would still be some months ahead, for Col. Frank Knox, Well-posted sources figure that will be the logical outcome of his activity in trying to line up state delegations.

The more states the former president mops up in advance, the fewer favorite sons will crop up at convention time to complicate matters. Moreover the bloc of Hoover delegates, while very unlikely to be strong enough to force the former president's nomination, quite probably will suffice to turn the tide in favor of any candidate to whom they are switched.

This would give Mr. Hoover at least the satisfaction, since he can't be named himself, of virtually deciding who the nominee is to be. While he hasn't committed himself as to whom he will favor, Knox is rated the most likely beneficiary. Hoover never did have much use for senators (such as Dickinson or Vandenberg), he wants to be sure the candidate is safely conservative, and it's known he thinks Knox is "all right."

Determined

New York right wingers are casting about for some new and effective solution to the problem of how to beat Roosevelt. Huey Long's death shot a big hole in their campaign plan that needs to be filled. They haven't much faith in Hearst's Jefferson Democrats or any other conservative third party as an instrument to alienate enough Democratic votes to assure a G. O. P. victory. Nor do they relish the prospect of a straight two-party Republican-Roosevelt contest. There's always the chance that the mass of voters might not be as Constitution-minded as they would like.

One suggestion is being given a lot of consideration by backstage planners. It involves building up former Budget Director Lew Douglas as a serious opponent of Roosevelt for the Democratic nomination. This would imply sidetracking the third party idea and concentrating all forces on capturing the regular Democratic convention. Even its sponsors admit this would be a desperate long shot effort, but they contend there's no more promising alternative in sight, and argue that such a fight would at least tear party harmony to shreds.

Of course there's the angle that Mr. Douglas has sincere political ambitions of his own and might not care to let his future be sacrificed on the altar of anti-Roosevelt strategy. It would be a major miracle if the plan were successful, and if it weren't he would have made a lot of enemies in his party. But big-time anti-new deal leaders are determined not to leave the outcome of the '36 battle merely to chance and the Republican party, so watch for signs that a Douglas ground-swell is being manufactured.

Fruits

Bankers with excellent European contacts get a new slant on the Anglo-Italian-Ethiopian crisis which makes the outlook for peace more promising than current headlines would indicate.

They hear that France, desperately anxious to prevent Anglo-Italian hostilities, has engineered a proposal with which Britain is in accord to be offered to Mussolini AFTER he has avenged the Adowa defeat. It would involve large credits to Italy from both French and English sources to exploit Ethiopian concessions in exchange for Duce's toning down his Mediterranean ambitions.

The plan hasn't been broached publicly yet because both French and English statesmen are reconciled to Mussolini's attitude that he must have one great military victory to wipe the Adowa blot from Italy's escutcheon. But once he has that victory he can afford to accept concessions, especially if they are dressed up to look like the fruits of military triumph. His face would be saved and his Italian expedition justified. If Duce hasn't committed himself, but France and England are privately hopeful. After all, large credits would ease his domestic problems a lot.

Tests

Secretary Morgenthau keeps Wall Street guessing, even when he's away on a vacation. The treasury was obviously supporting the government bond market in the early stages of the current, and final, fourth liberty bond conversion, and financial circles naturally expected that support to be maintained until the conversion was completed. But not so. Recent softening of prices indicates plainly that Uncle Sam's agencies have stepped out of the picture and are letting nature take its course.

New York observers can figure this out on the basis that the treasury wants to test the natural price levels for its securities when the stimulus of government buying order is withdrawn. If that was the idea the answer is reasonably satisfactory. Quotations haven't dropped nearly as far as anti-new dealers predict, though this may be partly due to the fact that big institutional holders, banks and insurance companies, have not been selling.

Prefers

Brokers loans have remained virtually static for months despite the rising trend of the stock market. This isn't at all according to Hoyle, and can only mean that the public still prefers other forms of gambling to stock speculation. (Copyright, 1935, McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

TODAY

By ARTHUR BRISBAVE

Big Men Meet

A WISE ONE says you would be surprised to know how many business meetings of important corporations from all over the nation were held in New York City Tuesday, the day of the big fight.

For an important business meeting, one day is as good as another, and if you had it Tuesday that enabled important officials to see the Louis-Baer fight in the regular course of business. Also, it was an excellent thing for New York hotels and for the railroads.

Big Exposition Coming

THE BIGGEST "world exposition" is coming—in New York City in 1939. Enthusiastically Mayor LaGuardia and his board of estimate approve the suggestion. New York knows what the "Exposition of Progress" did for Chicago in the depression and plans an even "bigger and better" exposition.

Many millions of dollars from all over the United States and Europe, and many millions of human beings will come to New York for that exposition. Those that know how to make exposition concessions profitable might begin preparing for what ought to be the greatest exposition ever organized.

Big British Backdown

AMUSING situation in Europe; England sends her gigantic fleet to the Mediterranean, heaviest dreadnaughts, submarines, airships, parks them around the Rock of Gibraltar and at the entrance of the Suez Canal, sends additional soldiers to the Island of Malta.

Mussolini puts his convenient island, off the north coast of Africa, in a state of siege, with submarines, airplanes, cutting the Mediterranean in two, isolating the big English fleet in the western end.

Then England, having shown an ardent desire to fight Italy, sends official word that she really hadn't any war with Italy in mind, her feelings were hurt by the Italian newspapers. That is why she sent her fleet.

Italy replied that what she had done had nothing to do with England. She sent her great battle ships to the Suez canal and put a million men under arms because she could not tell at what moment the terrific forces of Ethiopia might dash out and bite Italy's head off. For a while, it was a love feast.

Then came yellow-eyed suspicion. Mussolini told what he wanted in exchange for sweet harmony; an Italian railroad across Ethiopia, with a 32-mile strip of land on either side; complete control of Ethiopia, including any Ethiopian army. And, if Ethiopia has a seaport, he wants to control that seaport and he wants the railroad to go to it from Addis Ababa to go over Italian territory.

Mother England, in the language of 90 percent of her population, does not "old" with such theories. She suspects that Mussolini is playing for time, or that he imagines himself England's equal as a land grabber.

England has made it clear that she and the League of Nations do not want to fight. Knowing this, Mussolini who does not include "backing down" among his specialties, will probably go ahead.

Big News For Washington

WASHINGTON may be interested in the rumor that England, feeling the need of better defense plans a one billion dollar navy building program, including six battleships, 26 cruisers, 100 destroyers, 30 submarines, A "national defense loan" will supply the money.

We shall not have any trouble with the British, both countries possessing all they can digest and more. But we ought to have enough airplanes to sink all the ships that anybody can build, and enough submarines to sink any that the airplanes might miss.

With the right air and submarine equipment, like old Fafer on his "Rhinegold," we could sleep peacefully on our ten thousand million-dollar pile of gold.

Financiers tell you that with gold pouring in we shall surely have ten thousand million dollars worth of it soon. Much good may it do us, buried in a hole. One percent on the buried ten billions would build up a sufficient air and submarine fleet and enable us to protect the gold.

DeWolf Hopper Dies at 77

DEWOLF HOPPER is dead at 77, too soon. He worked to the last, talked over the radio in the afternoon, and was dead at 6:30 next morning. He should find a good seat reserved for him in the entertainment that lasts forever, in a better world. He spent his life working to make people smile and forget their sorrows. That is useful work.

News and Gossip of the Stage and Screen

FUTURE OF AMERICAN STAGE JUST STARTED, FAMED ACTRESS SAYS

Ethel Barrymore to Appear At Local Theater

Painting the future of the American theater in words of the brightest hue, Ethel Barrymore, reigning lady of the English speaking stage, is coming in person to the Ceramic theater for one performance on Thursday, Oct. 10, in Somerset Maugham's comedy hit, "The Constant Wife." She said recently that the stage was as "grand" and "glorious" as ever and only half started on its never-ending career.

"There is just about as much truth, I believe, in the legend of the theater having spun out its brief existence as there is that the 'road' is over and done with. Why, do you know," said Miss Barrymore, "that at one of the performances recently the manager came me with tears in his eyes, and when I thought he was going to tell me that half a dozen people alone made up the audience, he shook his head and said that no less than a thousand women had been turned away that afternoon. And then they say that the road is finished!"

"Why, the people are hungry for the theater. They come as if they were famished in all parts of the country. Last year they traveled in all sorts of funny little autos and other conveyances hundreds of miles to come to the theater. They acted as if they were starved—literally—and that holds for towns in which the waiting line at the box office spun around the block in front of the motion picture houses."

"It's a question only of honesty on the part of the producers and actors to keep up this spirit along the road," Miss Barrymore added. "As long as the public knows that what they are seeing is the best, they will come and be satisfied. If any killing has been done by producers it is because they have not lived up to their best traditions. Being one's best in the deep-seated hinterlands is just as important to the future of the stage as it is to rant and roar on Broadway."

ETHEL BARRYMORE TO OPEN LONG TOUR HERE

When Ethel Barrymore, noted stage actress, appears at the Ceramic theater in Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife," who will start a long road tour, it will be her first personal appearance in East Liverpool and the outstanding event in recent local dramatic history.

Salineville

Miss Betty Blazer entertained a party of friends in her home Monday night. Games and music were featured. The guests included Misses Helen Burgett, Bernice Blazy, Vivian Lewis and Ruth Selfredge.

Recent removals in Salineville included: Woodward family, from the Brothers property in East Main street to the Golden property also in East Main; Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson from the McIntyre property in Main street into the Brothers property; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mulhern from the Simpson property in East Main street to the Dukan house also on East Main street.

The following Salineville folk visited in East Liverpool recently: Eugene Yohst, Alfred Smith, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Gould, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gould and Joseph Mulhern.

Clyde McGrew and Robert Crumby of East Liverpool visited local friends Sunday.

Misses Orpha Tolson and Margaret Skinner are visiting with friends and relatives in Chicago.

Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Culp spent Sunday with the former's sister, Miss Alice Culp of Richmond.

Terry Boehm and James Hart visited with friends and relatives in Salem Monday.

Edith Russell of Girard spent the week-end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Russell. Donald Stewart of Toronto was a Salineville visitor Monday.

It is due to their training. I never have seen extra players snap into a scene and do it flawlessly the very first time the way these midshipmen do. These young men have never been in front of a camera before, but they act with the coolness and naturalness of veterans. The way they memorize is astounding. I merely read the dialogue to them from the script and that ended it. They hear what they have to say just once and then they go ahead and say it—and never miss. I haven't had an officer or midshipman "go up" on his lines yet. And when they are not working they stand quietly aside, watch and hear everything that's going on and are ready to step into a scene on a moment's notice.

Marry-Go-Round

The Weekly Roast

Love is sometimes a headache and sometime a luxury. But everything worth having in this world has both its price and its headache.

Why do they call a tentative engagement an "understanding," when the understanding never really comes until the divorce?

Nothing so shocks and surprises a man as to wake up and find himself walking to the altar beside the girl he thought he was only bluffing.

Being a one-girl man has its compensations. Many a modern man has gotten into hot water and lawsuits, by trying to be "God's Gift" to too many women at the same time.

No matter what high ideals and noble principles a man may stand for the woman who loves him feels justified in guarding him from any dirty blond that a less noble man might fall for.

Some day, the world will discover that being a wife is not a picnic or an avocation, but a great profession, requiring skill, science, application and natural ability.

When a woman asks too much from love, she is overdrawing her bank account with life, and always finds that she has to supply the deficit.

What chance has a man? If he loves and rides away, the girl hates him—and if he loves and lingers she marries him.

To be "as cold as a cucumber" may be a gift. But a girl can stand almost anything, except the cool, self-assured "take-me-or-leave-me-lucky-little-thing" attitude of the cucumber lover.

The average man's ideas about the straight-and-narrow path are almost as hazy as a taxi-driver's. (Copyright, 1935, K. F. S., Inc.)

Doctor Advises Against Ignoring Enlarged Glands

Causes for Adenitis, Which Is Sign of Infection, Related by Physician

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

ENLARGED glands or inflammation of the glands, "adenitis" as the condition is medically termed, is a sign of infection. It is rather a common occurrence when weather conditions are changeable, promoting colds and infections. One at any age may be affected by adenitis, but is more frequently encountered in children.

Each of us is supplied with the "lymphoid tissue" which constitutes the important structure of the glands. These glands are located in different parts of the body. They are really an important part of the defensive mechanism, intended to protect us against the dangers of germs and infection. They guard against the entrance of germs into the bloodstream.

When a gland becomes enlarged, swollen and tender, it means that there is infection somewhere. If the gland is not functioning properly the germs enter the blood stream and lead to serious complications. When the infection is severe the gland itself may become infected and then we have a condition which may prove to be quite serious.

As a rule the glands in the neck, face and jaw are most frequently involved. This is due to the frequency of infection of the different structures of the head, such as the nasal sinuses, teeth, gums, tonsils or ear.

Of course, certain other infections, such as severe colds, bronchitis, "flu," "Hodkin's disease" and tuberculosis are often characterized by enlargement of the glands. Enlarged glands are observed, too, in syphilis, infections of the skin, diphtheria, scarlet fever and measles. The condition is always a sign of infection and warrants investigation.

Persistent Adenitis

Let me tell you about persistent adenitis. In most cases the swollen glands subside and return to normal size as the underlying infection improves. But there is one form of adenitis that recurs at definite intervals. The gland enlarges, breaks down and allows pus to escape. The sinus or opening rarely closes completely and it continues to drain pus or a watery secretion. This should always arouse the suspicion of some serious infection, such as tuberculosis. It is best to have the pus examined for the germ of tuberculosis. If that disease is present, it is best to have the entire gland removed. Since this form of adenitis is most common in children and may be the forerunner of general tuberculosis, it is imperative that the young sufferer receive the best medical care.

After the gland is removed the patient should be given special lamp treatment or exposure to the ultra-violet rays of the sun. Special diet and general hygienic care are advised.

Of course, not all cases of adenitis in children are caused by tuberculosis. But enlarged and swollen glands, either in the child or adult, must never be ignored.

The Sunlit Road

BY TOM T. JONES

The village of Salineville in Washington township boasted a woolen mill in 1877 located within three minutes' walk of the Cleveland & Pittsburgh railroad station. The mill ranked among the early enterprises of the town which later became noted for its vast coal structure. Its machinery consisted of one set of first class machines with power looms and equipment for the manufacture of woolen fabric. The machinery was propelled by steam power. Its principal product consisted of heavy barred woolen flannels, blankets, stockings, yarn and other woolen articles. The goods found a ready sale being shipped to all parts of the country.

The woolen mill was erected in 1847 by James Farmer and was operated for more than two decades by J. A. and R. Montgomery. In Leetonia in 1877 there functioned an industry known as the Leetonia Pottery Manufacturing Co. which produced yellowware and Rockingham table ware, fruit jars and hanging baskets. It was located on Chestnut street and had the following officers: President, William Schwitzer; secretary, H. O. Siller and treasurer, M. H. Graul.

Another ceramic enterprise in the village was the Empire Fire Clay Co., which specialized in 15 and 20-gallon meat containers which were in great demand in that day. In terra cotta, its products were a great variety of window caps, cornice work, vases, fountains, lawn statuary and hanging brackets. The plant was located in Mill and Empire streets and was owned by A. Hold, J. A. Werner, Joseph Shontz and Sol E. Nold.

The present Mellinger lumber business in the town was organized Jan. 15, 1868 as Mellinger & Co. Initially A. Nold, H. C. and Daniel Mellinger were equal partners. In 1877 the firm consisted of H. C. Mellinger, C. G. Mellinger, J. F. Strasbaugh, J. Rogers, J. G. and W. Betz.

Another Leetonia industry in 1877 was the Cherry Valley Iron Co., which manufactured pig, muck and bar iron and also turned out Washingtonville coke. The industry continued to flourish until a few years ago when it suspended operations.

LOUIS HEADS FOR TOP OF PUGILISTIC RANKS AFTER K. O. OF BAER

No Doubt of Brown Bomber's Greatness After Passing 'Test' With Californian; Max Makes Mistake of Trying to Box and Gives Up in Fourth

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Staff Editor
NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—It looks like a non-stop fight to the top of the pugilistic heap for the brown bomber.

There remained today not the slightest doubt of the two-fisted greatness of Joe Louis, least of all in the minds of upward of 90,000 onlookers who saw the 21-year-old Detroit Negro on his bridal evening gown down the once magnificent Max Baer with a punching blast as deadly as machine gun fire.

Mercilessly, methodically, never wasting a blow and rarely slacking a punching pace that has had few equals in heavyweight history, Louis knocked out the former champion in the fourth round of a 15-round match that revived all the glamour of the prize ring in a near million dollar spectacle at the Yankee stadium.

Baer not only was completely outclassed but made the final mistake of trying to box Louis. He was knocked down three times, twice in the third round, where the bell saved him as he sat blinking on the floor. He was counted out while swaying on one knee near the end of the fourth round.

One Sided
It was the greatest heavyweight show but also one of the most one-sided, top-flight, heavyweight matches since the famous Tex Rickard died and the greater Jack Dempsey retired.

In 11 minutes and 50 seconds the youthful Negro punched Baer into a senseless wreck; a battered figure still trying to muster the pretense of his once marvelous powers of resistance, fading out of the picture in defeat with magnificent gestures of futility.

It seemed that Louis must have hit Baer nearly 500 times with as vicious a two-handed onslaught as any first-class heavyweight has absorbed since Dempsey slaughtered Jess Willard in Toledo in 1919 or hammered down Luis Angel Firpo in the Polo grounds in 1923.

It was, in the words of a late critic of the fight business, "modified murder" in every sense of the word a "killing" so devastating and complete as to leave not a single question for dispute.

On his honeymoon today, upward of $200,000 richer, and taking it all with the same coolness that characterizes his amazing ring workmanship, Joe Louis seemingly has no worries about a pugilistic future that contemporary word artists are pointing in the gaudiest possible hues.

Title Goal
The brown bomber's 25th consecutive victory and his 21st knockout since he turned professional scarcely 14 months ago capped the climax of the most spectacular march since Dempsey waded through all opposition to the world championship.

The title held by the ex-stevard, James J. Braddock in Louis' goal, but it probably will be a year before he gets the chance to claim it for his race for the first time since Jack Johnson ruled the fist heights.

A match with Max Schmeling, the German, who once wore the heavyweight crown, is the next major goal for the brilliant Negro. Promoter Mike Jacobs, heir to Rickard's mantle, said he plans to match Louis and Schmeling for a 15-round fight at either of New York's big ball parks next June, the winner to box Braddock for the title in September.

"Louis told me he wants to fight as often as possible," said Jacobs, who already has the Negro under contract for two more years with option on his fighting until 1940.

"He says that getting married now also means he will have to keep busy but it's going to be tough finding opponents. Unless some young fighter develops sufficiently during the winter to earn a match with Louis, it looks like he may have to wait until he meets Schmeling in the spring."

No Outstanding Foe
For those who saw Louis crush Baer, there isn't the slightest doubt that the chocolate soldier can and will whip Schmeling and then "take" the gallant Braddock. The simple, indisputable fact is that there is no outstanding heavyweight who figures to go the route under the bomber's barrage.

Baer was to provide the big test, demonstrate whether Louis could "take" and make the going tougher for Louis than all the fighters he has met combined.

Max may have had fury in his heart, but there was no dynamite in his fists. Instead of setting a whirling pace, he came out cautiously. Instead of slugging, he tried to box as masterful a young boxer as the ring has developed in a generation.

He absorbed, as he said he would, all that Louis could throw at him, but even concrete can resist T.N.T. only for a brief time.

After taking a terrific lacing for two rounds, Baer crumpled under the Negro's two-fisted fire and sagged slowly to the floor for the first time midway in the third round.

Saved by Bell
As he squatted, the curly-haired Californian managed another smile, and with the instinct of the great showman that he has always been, waved to the crowd that was on its feet, yelling for the "kill."

Frantically Jack Dempsey and other hangers told the battered former champion to "keep punching," but the old fire was gone. Max knew it, and so did everyone else.

Louis, still in no great hurry, methodically stalked his man, shifting his crushing left hooks to the body, blows that wiped the last vestiges of a grin from Baer's bruised, bleeding face.

Once Max flicked a back-hand blow to the bomber's face. The referee admonished him, but it was unimportant.

Soon Louis swept in again, smashing two lefts to the head, then a right that put Baer down for the last time. Max's eyes blinked. He was on one knee, swaying a bit. He didn't hear the count, and he didn't seem to care.

No Doubt of Outcome
He was still swaying when Referee Arthur Donovan swung his arm down for the 10th time. Baer was "out" for the first time in his career.

There was little or no doubt about the outcome from the first round, when Louis drew first blood with sharp left hooks to the nose and mouth, then backed Baer into a neutral corner and gave him a two-handed lashing that had the crowd wild.

All Baer did was to demonstrate that he could still "take it" and grin. He took plenty, he kept grinning, and when the bell rang he squared his shoulders, patted Louis patronizingly on the back and stalked to his corner.

Only twice did the former champion flash the sort of punching fury that battered down Schmeling and Primo Carnera. Midway in the first round, after being stung by the bomber's sharpshooting, Max let fly with both hands. He landed hard to the head, but yielded quickly to the Negro's counter blast.

In the closing moments of the second round Baer let loose his most spectacular attack. Rushing Louis to the ropes, Max flailed away lustily. He jolted Joe with another looping right.

Fought 'Overtime'
The bell rang, but Baer didn't hear it. He punched furiously, trying desperately to land a decisive blow. He did deliver his hardest wallop before the referee could stop the overtime slugfest, but Louis trotted to his corner unhurt.

All told, Baer didn't land a half dozen solid blows. His announcement afterward that he is through with the ring came as no shock to those who witnessed the failure of his attempted comeback.

For supreme nonchalance, however, Baer's career contains nothing to equal the latest achievement of Louis.

The Negro not only conceded all of Baer's requests for special gloves, more hand bandages and tape, but capped the climax by marrying his Chicago sweetheart, Marva Trotter, scarcely two hours before going to the stadium to face the greatest crowd that has ever seen a sports event in New York.

Receipts fell below expectations of another million-dollar gate, after a lapse of eight years, but the gross total of $932,944 collected from 84,831 cash customers, marked a remarkable fist comeback as well as a new "high" for any prize fight since the depression.

The size of the crowd was surpassed in fistic annals only by the turnouts for the two Dempsey-Tunney duels, the "gate" exceeded only by five of Tex Rickard's extravaganzas, all featuring Dempsey.

Dempsey Says No One In Sight to Beat Louis
By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Jack Dempsey, who seconded his "pal," Max Baer, thinks there is no heavyweight in sight with a chance to beat Joe Louis.

"Louis is good, there is no doubt about that," said the former world champion today. "It will take a really great fighter to beat him and there's no one around now capable of turning the trick."

Kidnapped by his protégé's showing, Dempsey declared that "Baer is all washed up."

"I told him he ought to quit," added the old mauler. "He simply hasn't got it any more."

"I sent Baer out there to fight, not box, but he wouldn't open up, except in one or two brief spurts. Between rounds I urged him to keep slugging. He didn't do it, and he couldn't even explain why he wasn't following instructions."

"At the finish he was knocked absolutely senseless. He didn't know where he was when we dragged him back to the corner."

Asked what he thought of his chances against Louis would have been, in his prime, Dempsey grinned and replied:

"Well, I'd have kept punching with him, doing the best I could." The former champion left the impression he thought he might have had quite a pleasant punching party with the brown bomber. His parting shot, however, was:

"I'm glad I'm in the restaurant business now."

SCIENTIST SAYS BAER DEFEATED BEFORE BATTLE

Unable to Follow Trainers' Orders; Pictures Louis As Thinking Fighter

Note: Dr. J. L. Moreno, mental expert who studied Max Baer and Joe Louis in their training camps, gives in the following article his analysis of the fight.

[Copyright, 1935, By The Associated Press.]
NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—A psychological knockout beat Max Baer as much as Joe Louis' mighty punch.

This psychological knockout began in the dressing room five minutes before the fight. Baer, Jack Dempsey and Billy McCarney were alone in the shower room.

"Max," said McCarney, "go in there fighting at the gong. Don't box that fellow or he will murder you."

"Yes," cut in Dempsey, "there will be no boxing."

"I'll go in fighting," Baer promised. Which is exactly opposite to which he did do.

What happened to Baer in the dressing room, the psychological knockout there, was the climax of training camp events.

Baer Brooded
At camp there was always a gap between him and his trainers. In phantasy he was brooding. He visualized himself and his opponent in detail. If he could have talked freely with someone, it might have helped. But he posed as a superman, tried to fool himself and everyone.

His body became stronger, but his mind became more desperate as the fight neared. Seeking a last straw, he asked Dempsey to be his second.

When he entered the ring there were two men fighting against him. One was the real Louis, peering at him. The other was the ghost of Louis, which his imagination had built up before the fight.

This I think explains why he did not even seem to try once the proper attack.

Holds Back Attack
He went out boxing, holding back his attack, subconsciously probably holding back for the calamity his mind had figured out.

It was not just stage fright, it was not "quitting" that some of the spectators murmured about. It was a state of mind built up by things over which Baer had little control, which became too real for him to overcome.

Louis showed some surprises. He did not fight by instinct alone—he was thinking. He was not the automaton in the hands of his trainer which the fans had been told to expect.

He was an independent Louis or more so than we had believed, making decisions on the spur of the moment.

"I think Baer took him by surprise. He expected a different Baer, a wild swinger, a vicious attack carried to him. He waited patiently for this. His attitude at the start was hesitating, watching."

He found out in these moments in the ring things which his trainer Jack Blackburn could not tell him. He felt through a psychology of his own that Baer had no defense against him.

Maybe in these moments the adolescent Louis became a man. Louis showed also intelligence of a sort concerning which little has been written. A real test of intelligence—one of the best—is the ability to live through the actual moments as they confront one, and not let the present instinct be overshadowed by moments of the past or future.

POTTERS FACE FIRST REAL GRIDIRON TEST IN NEW PHILADELPHIA

165-Pound Quaker Team Comprised of Many Veterans Has Exhibited Plenty of Power in Overwhelming Early Season Contestants

Tom Slusser's East Liverpool griders probably will be facing one of their toughest opponents of the 1935 campaign when they meet the starting white at New Philadelphia Friday night.

Taking into account such information as has trickled into town from the enemy camp, the Quakers appear to have one of their most formidable pigskin aggregations in recent years. They have speed, power and plenty of weight which, combined with an experienced line and a versatile backfield averaging 168 pounds, should make plenty of trouble for the Potters.

Some local football enthusiasts are skeptical of Liverpool's chances for victory. They base their fears on the total of 90 points which the two-city outfit has run up in their first two games and the fact that, although the locals have shown promise of great things, they have yet to be really tested.

Others point out that if the latter case is true for one side it should also hold for the other. The opposition faced by New Philadelphia has not been of any higher caliber than that faced by the Blue and White in scoring 60 points. The comparative scores mean nothing in that East Liverpool has been prone to substitute reserve material as soon as it was determined they were headed for victory.

Both factions agree that the fray Friday night will be an interesting spectacle and will not be one sided in either direction. Whichever team comes out on top will have to show plenty of class. If that team is East Liverpool, fans predict a highly successful season from then on.

The Ceramic City lads will be in there scrapping every minute of the game for they will remember that New Philadelphia has an obnoxious habit of coming from behind in the last half or during the closing minutes of play to snatch the victory away from eager local hands. They will also be watching for the Philly flankmen, little Jimmy Reiser who has in two occasions taken the wind out of Liverpool sails. Last year on Patterson Field he snatched a pass in the third quarter and ran for the touchdown that brought a 9-7 victory for the boys from Tuscarawas county. The year before he was largely responsible for the elimination of Tom Dixon's 1933-34 basketball team from the district tournament.

With the exception of the center post, New Philadelphia's 165 pound line will be composed of letter men from last year. In the backfield, Uptegraft and Wortman are veterans, whereas, Duda and Gopp have been drafted from reserve material. The latter, playing at quarterback, is a brother of the hard driving Roland Gopp who has starred at fullback on Quaker teams for the past several years. He saw some action last year. Wortman will be calling signals as usual but will be doing so from a halfback position.

The new bulked duo, tipping the scales at 190 pounds, will bring the average backfield weight close to 170 pounds and shows plenty of possibilities of tearing enemy lines to shreds. Another star on the New Philly horizon is a sophomore back, one Simonetti, who proved a sensation in last week's avalanche of touchdowns against Millersburg. The Quakers have not shown anything but straight football in their first two games but will probably open up against the locals in the game Friday night. Their forward passing attack has not been used to any great extent but there are several members of the team that can handle the ball well in this respect. Fans will probably see plenty of action on both sides when the rivals clash.

CUBS AND CARDS OPEN FIGHT FOR LEAGUE PENNANT

St. Louis Must Take Five Straight Contests to Cop 1935 Championship

By The Associated Press. The Dean brothers have found a task that measures up respectably to Dizzy's estimate of their capabilities.

With plenty of rest for their pitching arms, they will be thrown into the path of the oncoming Cubs, sweeping along the crest of 18 straight victories. Paul faced the first assignment today, with four days of rest, and Dizzy probably will take up the task tomorrow with the same amount of leisure behind him.

The Cards face a tough task, for they must sweep their five-game series with the Cubs to haul in the pennant, and it will take four to tie. The Cards have won 12 and lost five to Chicago this season, but that was before the Cubs soared into the lead by three full games.

The Cards showed they hadn't burned all their powder yesterday when they came back from the humiliating 12-0 defeat of the day before to beat the Pirates, 11-2.

Wild Bill Hallahan held the opposition in check with three hits, while his mates collected 11 hits, including homers by Jim Collins and Leo Durocher.

St. Louis sewed the game up in the first inning, Collins' 23rd homer of the season scoring Medwick ahead of him after King had walked, stole second and scored on Medwick's safety.

The disillusioned Giants took both games of a doubleheader from the Phillies, 6-0 and 7-6. Al Smith pitched tight ball for the Giants in the first, but seven errors by the Phillies contributed to the second victory. Mel Ott hit his 31st homer of the season in the first game.

The Brooklyn Dodgers pushed the Braves a little deeper into the cellar by taking both ends of their double bill 5-3 and 6-5. The second game went 11 innings.

The New York Yankees defeated Washington 14-6, pounding Bump Hadley and Olin Rogers for 16 hits. The New Yorkers scored five runs in the second.

The Cleveland Indians collected 15 hits to defeat the Detroit Tigers 14-7. The Tigers, with the pennant in their belts, allowed the Indians to have what little satisfaction they got from the victory.

Three rookie pitchers were throwing balls all over the lot as the Red Sox downed the Athletics twice, 8-2 and 6-5. Connie Mack ordered in his rookies, who handed out 15 passes.

The Browns took both games in a doubleheader with the White Sox, 3-0 and 6-3. Irving Burns hit a pair of homers, one in each game.

The Fire Drill

How the audience did laugh as the ducks came waddling out on the stage. They were certainly looking for the best, and they had odd bits of ribbon and shawls and little jackets they had brought with them from Willy Nilly's Big Box That Held Things Just For Fun.

Mrs. Quacko carried her parrot, her w a t e r lily leaf fan and her feathered hand bag which Mr. Quacko had given her on her last birthday.

"I think," said Willy Nilly, "There should be a waddling race first of all, and then I believe we should show these good people a fire drill."

So after the waddling race which was won by Quacko Duck, they all went back of the curtain and came forth again wearing their fire helmets, and carrying out their smaller ladders and a hose.

"Now," said Willy Nilly, "my good friends, ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls, I wish to introduce Mr. Quacko Duck, our fire chief."

"He can direct and take charge whenever any fire breaks out. You may not be able to understand all his quacking directions, but you will see that he knows what he is doing and that the others are following his instructions."

First Willy Nilly rang a bell to show that there was a make-believe fire, and at once Mr. Quacko arranged his helmet and shouted quacking directions to the others. They all took hold of the ladder and put it down along the front of the stage and then they dragged the hose to one side of the stage.

Now they climbed up and down the ladder and the audience was amazed. But that was not all.

PERSONAL ISSUE
MAY BE BITTER
IN 1936 BATTLEAttack Already Centers on Sincerity of President
In New Deal Acts

IMMUNITY CAST ASIDE

Constitution as Outstanding
Question Before Voters
Becomes ConfusingBy BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Two aspects of the current political discussion are noteworthy for 1936. One is the tendency toward extreme personal bitterness. The other is the failure to agree on clear-cut public issues.

Day by day the debate over the personal competency and even the sincerity of Mr. Roosevelt grows in volume. Day by day the fog of words surrounding the acclaimed central issue—the constitutional issue—becomes thicker and more confusing.

"One of the bitterest campaigns in history" now is commonly predicted for next year by politicians. When they say that, most of them do not refer to the developing discussion about the constitution. They know how difficult it is going to be to define that issue in terms which the ordinary voter will understand. They refer to personalities.

To some degree, every President running for reelection becomes the real issue of the campaign. If the present trend continues, that promise to be true in a very high degree indeed of President Roosevelt in 1936.

A Radical Change
Development of the personal attack on the President is all the more interesting in view of his long immunity from that sort of criticism.

For many months after he took office, it was a matter of general remark that those who disagreed with administration policies seldom aimed their artillery at the White House. They attacked, not Mr. Roosevelt, but Mr. Farley, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Ickes, Dr. Tagwell, or the "brain trust," or some other individual or group. That was unusual.

The change has been a radical one. Recently various of Mr. Roosevelt's political enemies have referred to him as a faithless public servant, a breaker of promises, a deceiver, an opportunist.

When he announced a "breathing spell" for business, the burden of many opposition replies was that the promise should not be taken seriously—in other words, that the promise could not be trusted. Such a reply goes to the heart of the President's sincerity. That also is unusual, in recent years it has been customary for opponents to question the wisdom and capability of presidents and presidential candidates, but concede their sincerity. It may be different.

Mr. Dooley's Question

So far as the constitutional issue is concerned, a whole flood of ordinary leaves much to be said. Both sides declare they are for the Constitution. Neither side has said it would favor an amendment, or would oppose an amendment. The issue would seem to be one of degree—a question exactly how far the federal government should go in regulating activities.

It remains for some one to draw that line in words of one syllable. It is hard to see how the rank and file ever will get a clear understanding from the abstract arguments of lawyers or the circuitous utterances of those on both sides—who do not themselves appear certain just what they will favor.

Perhaps it is too much to suppose the issue ever will be translated into plain English. Perhaps the electorate will have to do as Mr. Dooley predicted years ago that a certain court jury would do in a celebrated murder case hinging on circumstantial evidence.

Listen to all the hypothetical questions and the technical answer of the expert witnesses, and then ask itself two questions: First, does the defendant look as if he had killed the victim? Second, did the victim look as if she deserved to be killed?

MORNING STAR

— BY MARIAN SIMS —

SYNOPSIS: Emily Felton has at last taken steps to divorce the terrifyingly upright Edwin Barnes, whose fine mental elasticity, Emily has won her father and mother to her side, has found herself rather the heroine of her home town for her decision, and has gone to visit her school friend, Judith, at Morton Hall, her husband's plantation. There is a little pain in the visit, however, because Judith's brilliant brother David is the man Emily first loved.

Chapter 37 CARROLLTON ONCE MORE

Judith grinned adoringly at her young David. "His mother's sunny disposition," she chuckled, "Come on up and get the Alabama sand out of your ears."

While Emily bathed and changed Judith lay flat on her back on a chaise longue and chattered incessantly.

She was incredibly unchanged; in appearance she looked the same mature and self-sufficient eighteen that she had been almost eight years ago. Suddenly she raised herself on one arm and looked keenly at Emily.

"Of course, it's none of my business and I know I shouldn't ask, but I can't stand the strain any longer. Emily darling, you were so very vague in your letter; is this break permanent?"

Emily nodded slowly. "Very." Judith collapsed on the couch and blinked at the ceiling. "Thank God! I knew it couldn't work and I'd been horribly afraid you were the kind who would grin and bear it to the bitter end."

"The sooner I get used to it, the better."

"I might have," she confessed, "if I hadn't found out accidentally that he was doing the same thing. Not grinning, because he isn't that sort, but bearing it."

"Tell me about it," Judith commanded.

Emily told her, taking scrupulous care to recount her own share in the failure.

Judith brushed that carelessly aside.

"I know; I know. You were just as much to blame as he was, but I'd have cast you off if you hadn't been." Her eyes sparkled. "This is better than I dared to hope. Now you can stay on indefinitely and we can have a gorgeous time!"

Emily protested laughingly. "We can't do everything your tone implies. I'm in a delicate position, remember."

"Not down here, you aren't. It's a position that this outfit will thoroughly understand and sympathize with."

"But do they have to know anything about it?" she asked in consternation. "I thought we wouldn't even mention it."

Judith scowled at her. "Have you, or have you not, left your husband? And if they know it in Elston it will leak down here sooner or later, so you may as well be brazen about it."

She sighed. "All right, I suppose the sooner I get used to it the better off I'll be."

Judith rose. "Dorinda will unpack the trunk and the rest of those things. Come on down and let me show you to Aubrey."

Emily had been prepared to like Aubrey Morton for Judith's sake, but she had reckoned without Judith's unerring instinct for people.

Aubrey was fatish, as Judith had said, with glasses and not much hair. He was barely as tall as Judith and was obviously ten or twelve years older, but you knew immediately that he was just the sort of man Judith should have married.

Behind the glasses his eyes were keen and twinkling, and his handshake was warm and firm.

"I'd about decided you were like Santa Claus," he said; "somebody you hear about but never see."

His voice was a musical drawl, more reminiscent of the cotton fields than the Carroll voices, which had been tempered with Virginia meticulousness. Emily liked him at once.

"I know it," she apologized. "I don't deserve to be remembered."

He smiled. "If Jude ever gets on your trail you haven't got a chance of being forgotten. Not," he added thoughtfully, "that I blame her."

Judith interrupted gaily. "While we're exchanging bouquets let's have a cocktail."

Judith lifted the glass that Aubrey had handed her. "To—the future!"

Aubrey glanced sharply at her, and watching them Emily saw that neither expression had changed, but that Judith had managed with a single slight inflection to convey the entire situation to her husband.

She sensed too that Aubrey had accepted it, and secure in his confidence in Judith's judgment, had approved it. That, she realized with a surge of longing, was what marriage should mean; that was what she and Edwin would never have achieved in a lifetime.

She drank the vast spiritual difference that separated Elston from Morton Hall.

Dinner, even with the three of them, had a festive air; for Judith possessed the family gift for endowing the most casual act with ceremony. During the meal she talked incessantly.

"I didn't plan any sort of party for tonight; there's too much to talk about. After I've had a detailed account of the last few years I'll call in the neighbors and show you off, but not tonight."

"I'm glad you didn't," Emily confessed. "I'd rather get re-acquainted first. Not," she added to Aubrey, "that it's a bit difficult. I've simply taken up where I left off eight years ago."

Judith grinned. "That's my amazing personality. Except that you must have it too, because just seeing you makes me feel like a girl again."

Aubrey chuckled, and beamed impartially at them both. Emily thought with amusement that his attitude towards Judith suggested an old hen who had hatched a young swan. She liked Aubrey Morton more than ever.

In her room that night Judith ran a comb through her short, cloudy hair and stared thoughtfully at her reflection in the mirror.

Aubrey stopped undressing and didn't bother to remind her that it was he who had given her that piece of information; he knew that Judith looked suspiciously at her. He was merely thinking aloud.

"Carrollton is on the market again," she said.

"So what?"

"It can be bought for the price of the mortgage. And since Harrow didn't mortgage it until after the market crash the amount can't be much. Bankers weren't having any plantations by that time."

"It probably not worth much," Aubrey reminded her. "Harrow morrow,

PASSENGERS ON GORDON GREENE NUMBERED 1,500

New River Packet Completed 28 Voyages Between Pittsburgh, Cincinnati

BOAT TO BE ENLARGED

Dredge Columbus to Deepen Channel From Brown's Island to Creek

With the closing of the upper Ohio river season, Capt. Tom Greene announced today the packet, Gordon C. Greene, listed approximately 1,500 round-trip passengers on its 28 voyages between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati. The boat carried 148 tons of merchandise and 45 passengers on her final trip past East Liverpool, enroute south, this week. She will enter the Cincinnati-Louisville trade, returning to the upper Ohio in May, 1936.

Within the next few months the Texas deck will be remodeled and first class staterooms with all modern conveniences installed, increasing the capacity to 160 passengers.

Former Packet Engines Bought
Capt. Greene has purchased the main engines of the former packet Emma Graham to be installed on one of his steamers. The engines, of the high pressure type, are 18 inches with a 6-foot stroke. The Emma Graham operated in this district and sank at Ripley Landing, W. Va.

The suction dredge Columbus has started deepening the channel of the Ohio river between the head of Brown's island, near Toronto, and King's creek. A pipe line, supported on pontoons, will be placed across the river to the disposal area opposite the Follansbee Brothers' mill. A channel 210 feet wide has been provided on the south side of the river for use by boats while operations are under way at this point.

Dredge Repairs are Made
The Pittsburgh Coal Co. at its marine ways has completed repairs to government dredges No. 95 and 97, finishing a contract for work on nine pieces of floating equipment.

Federal derrickboat No. 3 has completed a stone fill around the river guide wall at the Montgomery island dam, near Midland, Pa., and has moved to the site of the old Ohio river dam No. 3 to unload stone for storage.

The towboat Fairplay reentered the trade today after undergoing repairs on the Dravo marine ways. The Champion Coal and J. H. Hillman are towing coal to mills in the Toronto, Steubenville and Wheeling district.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You feel constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A more bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. Same. Stubblerly refuse anything else. Same. Stubblerly refuse anything else. Same.
